However, the nation's abundant renewable energy resources, such as solar, wind, and hydropower, present a unique opportunity to transform its energy market and pave the way for sustainable development. One of the primary reasons for São Tomé and Príncipe's reliance on fossil fuels is the lack of a robust energy infrastructure.

To remind, SIDS DOCK and Global OTEC Resources signed a memorandum of understanding in July 2021, setting out modalities for collaboration for mobilizing resources to further ocean energy projects in SIDS, and advance the development of ocean energy policies.
